

Register of Trauma Specialists

When someone has been beaten or abused, the next problem they face should not be finding someone to help them.

Are you that someone?

Do you - work with survivors of domestic abuse, survivors of torture, attempted murder, failed suicides, hostage taking, shootings, stabbings, rape, victims of violent robbery and assault, road traffic accidents? Military or emergency services personnel suffering from PTSD?

Can you - help when someone tells you the only relief from their pain is when they self-harm?

If any of the above applies to you, then consider joining the Register of Trauma Specialists. The Register has been established:

- to promote our work as trauma specialists
- to set up a UK wide network of trauma specialists to whom the public may confidently refer

A dedicated UK-based Register specifically for trauma specialists working in England, Scotland and Wales is long overdue.

Who is eligible to join?

Any therapist or trauma specialist able to demonstrate relevant training and experience of working with trauma victims.

How will this benefit survivors?

Survivors will have access to a directory of practicing trauma specialists and information on the types of treatments and interventions which are known to be effective. They'll learn they're not alone and that their symptoms aren't abnormal.

How will the Register benefit therapists?

- Your name and contact details will be published on our website, which will be widely advertised both on and offline
- You'll have a personal profile page where you can publish full details of your services, including a photo or your logo. This is in addition to your general listing by region
- You have the opportunity to expand your client base. Your details will be seen both by individuals seeking help and organisations
- When you register you gain access to our rapidly growing Knowledge Base of reports, articles, information on new developments and news of important incidents to help with your professional development
- You'll be part of a supportive community. Every other specialisation has this but not until now specifically aimed at UK based trauma specialists. The support and advice of your peers is vital, especially in the type of work we do
- A professional insurance scheme with one of the UK's most innovative insurance companies
- The credibility of agreeing to abide by a Code of Ethics
- Low registration fees, currently £50 a year
- Reduced registration fees, £25, for those on low incomes, evidence of status will be required
- Graduates of our accredited training courses qualify for their first 12 months registration free
- You also gain access to documents which will help with your client management, freeing you from part of your administrative burden

Join now!

This is not just a register but a home for all trauma specialists in the UK.
Set up and run by experienced trauma therapists.

The application process is straightforward – simply send us copies (not originals) of your qualifications and insurance certificates. Scanned copies via email are acceptable. If not currently insured to practice we can assist in helping you to obtain insurance. There is no processing fee for applications. Once your application has been approved you will be advised of your unique registration number and your details will be entered on the register's public directory on our web site.
